Flight Simulators and their value in learning and maintaining proficiency

Flight simulators have been around since 1910, when French commanders first build ground training aircraft. Join us Thursday, March 18 at 7 pm as Illinois Aviation Museum presents "Flight Simulators and their value in learning and maintaining proficiency" via Zoom. In this seminar we will discuss what training is done in simulators, the benefits of simulators to new and experienced pilots, and how simulators are used to help pilots practice emergency procedures or unusual situations from the safety of the ground.
